OF THE PUBLIC.

Mr. ULLMAN, in calling upea the public to support him in this novel movement so much in conformity with the times, wishes to have it distinctly understood that, not-withstanding the very moderate price of admission to this really wonderful and extraordinary combination, the general arrangements as regards orchestra, chorus and miss en secent will be as complete and perfect as during any previous season given under his direction. The very great expense precluces any hope of profit; he merely is desirous of worthly winding up the season, to complete the number of nights as stipulated in his lease, and trust that the brillancy of the performances, and the pleasere that will be derived from them by the expected great number of new visitors, will induce them to patronize in the future this most refined and intellectual annusement of the day, and thus increase the regular patronage of
